Notes:

² The above table reflects the fund's benchmark, which is a combination of market indices, weighted according to the strategic asset allocation. The strategic asset allocation, ranges and market indices for our diversified funds change infrequently. This table is only updated when a change to strategic asset allocation, ranges or market indices is made.
